Hi Pippa,
Apologies for the delay we were all off-site on Friday. Brodie and Sarah have discussed your email, Brodie's response is below:

Hi Pippa

Good to meet with you and Simon last week and we continue to appreciate the support you are providing to this project. I have also asked Council for clarification on what we need to provide for the landowner approval.

Regarding the path, the photos show the layout of the path and memorial in the draft design. This was prepared for a site meeting by the design team, also attended by the arborists we have contracted. The value of this exercise is that it has highlighted a number of issues and resulted in a number of minor changes to improve the design.

You will receive this updated information once developed design has been completed (early next week) but in summary, the memorial has been pivoted around its outermost end so that the base has shifted by about 6m. This was done to leave a larger area of lawn to the north of the memorial – a better use of the space. The path has also shifted. A new path is necessary to enable wheelchair access to the memorial at the required 1:20 gradient. As a result of the site visit, the new path now follows the existing path more closely (to the west of the coral tree rather than to the east as shown in the photos) and the memorial itself has been raised slightly to meet the path on a 1:20 gradient. The impact on the existing site is that the path now encroaches far less into the lawn than in the previous version of the design.

I will pass on [REDACTED]'s concerns to the design team so they are aware that the paths are a sensitive issue. You will receive the revised drawings as part of the landowner approval process.

Kind regards
Brodie

Hi Brodie

Thanks to you and Sarah for meeting the other day. Simon is following up on the process for landowner consent but Shale as parks lead has confirmed he is happy to act on this delegation rather than a formal business meeting report. He is just away all of July so we will need to work around that.

[REDACTED] approached me yesterday with concerns about the location of a new path.

Is it possible to provide this information requested? Or at least an outline of where the new path is proposed?

Thanks

Hi Pippa,

As discussed at this evenings Parnell Plan launch.

Here are the photos taken today and the latest update from 9 (2) (a) [redacted]. As discussed, we need to see the plan view and only then can we input our local knowledge of desire line access from multiple tracks and also the following from 9 (2) (a) [redacted] - If there is a chance for any review at all- it would be good not to have the new path bisecting the gorgeous north lawn. Can access not be from the existing path or joined onto the path branch off the existing one further along to leave some lawn?

The other issue is way finding signage to this memorial - how many, and where will they be placed?

Happy to meet on-site if needed.

Thanks for your response 9 (2) (a) [redacted] and apologies for the delay in getting back to you, Brodie has asked me to respond.

The existing paths within Dove Myer Robinson park are unaffected by the new memorial. The designers are currently working on the developed design which includes a new path which leads to the memorial. The next stage following developed design is landowner approval and resource consent, so the council will be checking the proposed path at this stage also.

Thanks,

Hi Brodie,

Thanks for getting back to us.

We have a community meeting this coming Tuesday and it would be great if we could get a plan view of exact location in Sir Dove Myer Robinson Park and how pedestrian access will work off existing and/or new pathways

Your Final Design link (<https://mch.govt.nz/national-erebus-memorial/final-design>) does not give this design information.
