Dear John

REQUEST FOR INFORMATION

Thank you for your email dated 19 January 2022 requesting:

With respect to the "Consent to Assume Online Internet Identity" form (a sample of which has been provided in response to OIA request IR-01-21-36948), please provide any policy, operational procedural and/or internal guidance document(s) on the usage of such form.

I have considered your request in accordance with the Official Information Act 1982 (OIA).

As this process is conducted by way of consent, there is no specific approval process in force that governs the use of this document. In essence, the document is one method by which Police can record actions undertaken through consent as it relates to online accounts. Alternatively, Police can record any interactions in their notebooks and in written statements provided by individuals to achieve the same outcome.

I have attached an excerpt from the Police internal intranet page relating the Police Online Child Exploitation across New Zealand (OCEANZ) team. The form is accessible on this intranet page and is accompanied with a brief explanatory paragraph. Some information is withheld from this document pursuant to section 6(c) of the OIA on the basis that its release would prejudice the maintenance of the law.

OCEANZ

The Online Child Exploitation across New Zealand (OCEANZ) is a National criminal investigation group based at PNHQ.

It was formed in 2009 in response to an increase in internet-based crime. It is part of the Virtual Global taskforce - an international partnership, to help protect children from online abuse and other forms of transnational child sexual exploitation.

OCEANZ is staffed by a Detective Sergeant, six Detectives and a Victim Identification investigator. The team work closely with internal government agencies such as the Department of Internal Affairs (DIA) and the NZ Customs Service as well as overseas law enforcement agencies.

 We also receive referrals from overseas law enforcement agencies about New Zealand-based suspects believed to have committed online offences.

How we can help

Advice - We can provide operational advice, leadership, support and guidance to police staff, other agencies and jurisdictions, in relation to online child exploitation investigations.

Contacts – We have contacts with overseas law enforcement agencies that we can use on your behalf in some investigations.

Account takeovers – We can help with covert account takeovers. If you have apprehended a suspect involved in supplying or trading child exploitation material and they give you their social media or applications login details we can try to apprehend their associates. Suspects are often happy to give their login details once caught and this should be considered after an interview if appropriate. See authorised account takeover form.
