Also, how many applications you have received from the public and how many you have received from other nominating agencies such as TPK or ministry of women."

Your request has been considered under the Act.

As there have been two Electrical Workers Registration Board advertisements recently, we will provide information to you on both for clarity.

The first recruitment round was for two positions and was open from 21 September 2022 to 21 October 2022. MBIE called for public nominations through the following:

- an invitation from the Minister to her Caucus colleagues to provide nominations
- advertising on the MBIE careers website, Seek and jobs.govt.nz website
- requesting nominations from the Ministry of Women, Ministry of Ethnic Communities, Ministry for Pacific Peoples, Ministry for Disabled Peoples, and Te Puni Kokiri
- circulation of the advert through the Electron newsletter, an electrical industry publication

We have received 23 applications from this recruitment round. The Ministry of Women forwarded the role onto two nominees, however, neither of them chose to apply. The Ministry for Ethnic Communities nominated one candidate for the role. No other candidates were from nominating agencies.

The second recruitment round was for one position and was open from 4 November 2022 to 28 November 2022. MBIE called for public nominations through the following:

Labour, Science and Enterprise

We have received eight applications for this role. All were received from the general public, with none being received from nomination agencies.

I trust you find the information helpful.
