Bishop is yet to reveal the social housing policy the party will take to the election, but when asked if there will be job losses at Kāinga Ora he said "hope so".

Subject: Politics

Hi 9(2)(a)

As we endure endless rounds of policy announcements promising us this that and the other (to be paid for when the Governmental credit card bill is due, it brings to mind this joke which my wife told me about the other day. Apologies if you have heard it before:

While walking down the street one day, a high-ranking politician is tragically hit by a truck and dies. His soul arrives in heaven and is met by St. Peter at the entrance. "Welcome to Heaven," says St. Peter. "Before you settle in, it seems there is a problem. We seldom see a high official around these parts, you see, so we're not sure what to do with you." "No problem, just let me in," says the politician. "Well, I'd like to but I have orders from higher up. What we'll do is have you spend one day in Hell and one day in Heaven. Then you can choose where to spend eternity." "Really, I've made up my mind. I want to be in Heaven," says the politician. "I'm sorry but we have our rules." And with that, St. Peter escorts the politician to the elevator and he goes down, down, down to Hell.

The doors open and he finds himself in the middle of a green golf course. In the distance is a club and standing in front of it are all his friends and other politicians who had worked with him, everyone is very happy and in evening dress. They run to greet him, hug him, and reminisce about the good times they had while getting rich at the expense of the people. They play a friendly game of golf and then dine on lobster and caviar. Also present is the Devil, who really is a very friendly guy and has a good time dancing and telling jokes. They are having such a good time that, before he realizes it, it is time to go. Everyone gives him a big hug and waves while the elevator rises. The elevator goes up, up, up and the door reopens on Heaven where St. Peter is waiting for him.

"Now it's time to visit Heaven." So 24 hours pass with the politician head of state joining a group of contented souls moving from cloud to cloud, playing the harp and singing. They have a good time and, before he realizes it, the 24 hours have gone by and St. Peter returns. "Well then, you've spent a day in Hell and another in Heaven. Now choose your eternity." He reflects for a minute, then the head of state answers: "Well, I would never have thought it, I mean Heaven has been delightful, but I think I would be better off in Hell." So Saint Peter escorts him to the elevator and he goes down, down, down to Hell.

Now the doors of the elevator open and he is in the middle of a barren land covered with waste and garbage. He sees all his friends, dressed in rags, picking up the trash and putting it in black bags. The Devil comes over to the politician and lays an arm on his neck. "I don't understand," stammers the politician. "Yesterday I was here and there was a golf course and club and we ate lobster and caviar and danced and had a great time. Now all there is a wasteland full of garbage and my friends look miserable." The Devil looks at him, smiles and says, "Of course! Yesterday we were campaigning. Today you voted for us!"

PS. Looks like the potential Minister of Housing has intentions to deal to Kāinga Ora.....this was in Stuff the other day. Click on the hyperlink

Chris Bishop, who hopes to be housing minister after the October 14 general election, has also faced more questions about cutting jobs at Kainga Ora. When asked about whether jobs will be cut, he told Stuff: "Hope so".

When pressed more by Corinn Dann on Morning Report, he said: "I want more social houses in New Zealand and that is what our policy will reflect. I am simply saying it doesn't all have to be done by Kainga Ora and it doesn't all have to be done by public bureaucracy."

Subject: The future

Herein is one potential future for KO:

Chris Bishop, who hopes to be housing minister after the October 14 general election, has also faced more questions about cutting jobs at Kainga Ora. When asked about whether jobs will be cut, he told Stuff: "Hope so".

When pressed more by Corinn Dann on Morning Report, he said: "I want more social houses in New Zealand and that is what our policy will reflect. I am simply saying it doesn't all have to be done by Kainga Ora and it doesn't all have to be done by public bureaucracy."

Of course it isn't all being done by us now; and many of the homes we are building are done by private developers whom we contract.

This is the same Mr Bishop who refer to us as the country's biggest slumlord.

As the academic quoted in the hyperlinked articles says, he did not believe the market could be relied upon to solve the housing crisis -

"Based on my experience, the market exploits any problem," he said. "The market is one of the reasons we have had a housing crisis for many years."

"I think certainly Kāinga Ora could continue to learn a bit more from experts, but not from politicians. Lurching from one thing to another is not helpful when we are dealing with big problems."

When asked if there will be job losses at the agency [Kāinga Ora], he said: "Hope so". (Chris Bishop)

Also Chris Luxon has relayed this messaging in a press conference last week.

Good morning both ☺

I just want to bring up the election campaigns going on currently. Throughout media, there have been comments made by politicians stating that there 'will be redundancies at Kāinga Ora'.

This is obviously very unsettling for some Kāinga Ora staff. If the PSA could address this and possibly reassure the staff at Kāinga Ora that they have our back on this and what this may look like, this would be good.

Cheers,
