Dear Mr Lee

I refer to your Official Information Act 1982 request of 04 October 2018 for information relating to the enforcement system for speed and red light cameras.

You requested:

- 1. details of the limitations of the enforcement system related to speed and red light cameras.*
- 2. According to the details discussed at the Akl Council Planning Committee meeting on 3/Sep [1] the NZ Police has a back office constraint that limits the enforcement of speed and red cameras. Please provide details about the technology, limits of this technology and plans that NZ Police have to improve this technology.*

New Zealand Police has a service contract with DXC Technology which includes the Police Infringement Processing System and Police will not comment on the limitations of the technology. Therefore, this part of your request is refused pursuant to section 9(2)(b)(ii) of the Official Information Act 1982, as the withholding of the information is necessary to protect information where the making available of the information would be likely unreasonably to prejudice the commercial position of the person who is the subject of the information.

As with any form of technology, the Police Infringement Processing System (PIPS) will need to be replaced at some point. Presently, it is processing the volumes generated by static speed cameras, mobile speed cameras, red light cameras, and officer-issued infringements. In terms of processing more cameras, there are other systems and processes which would have to be considered capacity wise, such as the download of additional cameras to the Police infringement Bureau, calibrations, and workflow to other agencies. Auckland Transport and New Zealand Police are working closely together on road safety and enforcement of red light cameras. Our agencies have regular meetings to discuss opportunities in these areas. We are all committed to working together to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads.

You have the right to complain to the Ombudsman and seek an investigation and review of my decision if you are not satisfied with the way I have responded to your request.

Yours sincerely
